Wheeler Criticizes Ruling

The Director of the State Department of Veterans Service, Pete Wheeler, has criticized the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court to refuse Army Special Agent and American trial lawyer, Grant Wheeler, to have his civil rights restored after he was convicted by the Constitution of the United States.

"This soldier, when inducted into the armed forces, pledged his life to protect the same constitutional rights that are at this very moment being denied him."

"It would be a different matter entirely, if Grant had attacked and killed a Japanese anywhere and been convicted of a crime."

else but on a United States Military Reservation that he was ordered to guard on behalf of the United States Government," Wheeler stated.

"There is no doubt in my mind that the Justices of the Supreme Court, in releasing Grant to the mercy of the Japanese, have made another blunder that will have serious effects on far-reaching that even they cannot comprehend," he said.

In conclusion, Wheeler commented, "I feel sure our forefathers never anticipated that a U. S. Supreme Court would ever rip up our Constitution and sacrifice an American soldier simply to please a foreign nation."

Anaplasmosis In Cattle Increases

Anaplasmosis, sometimes called "gall sickness," has been reported from 32 states and can no longer be considered a disease chiefly limited to warmer areas, according to the Journal of the American Veterinary Medical Association.

A disease affecting chiefly mature cattle, it is spread by biting insects and most likely to occur from June to November, with occasional cases showing up in the colder months.

In the acute form, anaplasmosis is characterized by anemia, dehydration, extreme weakness and a high fever, the Association said. Recovered animals can carry and spread this disease for long periods.

Massive doses of antibiotics administered by a veterinarian can have been effective in completely clearing the infection from the blood of affected cattle, veterinary authorities say, but the cost of such high level dosage makes it economically impractical for general control.

When valuable breeding animals are found to be infected, this system of treatment may be economically practical, but such treatment should be used with laboratory tests under veterinary supervision, the Association said.

Information On Annexing Proposition

With an election scheduled in Statesboro for Friday, July 26, whether or not the petitions will be granted and certain adjacent areas to the city will be annexed, Mayor W. A. Bowen and City Engineer James Bland held a press interview to give full information to the public.

In his opening remarks Mayor Bowen stated that "perhaps the most pressing problem that the city has is the need for an adequate sewage treating and disposal plant and sewage system."

He went on to say that in planning an adequate system as recommended by engineers not only the present but the future growth of the city has to be taken into account and that one of the very first things that had to be determined in the present requirements that would have to be met.

Accordingly certain areas that are rapidly building up or have been built up and that are geographically a part of the Statesboro community have been brought to the attention of the city.

The purpose of the required residents of the particular areas petitioned the city of Statesboro to be annexed and to become a part of the incorporated limits of the city. The election on Friday by qualified voters on the voting list of the city will only give the voter the only opportunity to vote his opinion "For or Against Annexation" of the particular areas more specifically designated as Areas One, Two and Three.

By voting "For Annexation" of the areas will allow the city to include the areas as a part of the city limits and will allow those citizens the same services that residents of the city receive. This will include police protection, garbage pick-up, fire protection, street lights, street maintenance and water and sewerage. The list will also include natural gas service.

The mayor pointed out that the difference in cost as brought about by the payment of city taxes would in many cases be nearly offset by the reduction of insurance rates and the savings in garbage pick-up, additional water charges and fire protection. "But in any event," he continued, "the folks in those areas have in effect asked us to allow them to become a part of us and now we must say whether or not we will grant their request."

Hastening to add his own opinion, Mayor Bowen stated that actually "we have no alternative and we must plan for the service of the city for the present and for a future growth extended by some twenty to thirty years and not include the rapidly growing areas that have petitioned would not be logical or feasible. Certainly we want them to be a part of our city," he said, "and we can with this forward step continue to build a Statesboro that can be pointed out as the finest and most progressive community in Georgia."

The areas petition are those to the north of the present city limits, Jewell drive and vicinity, the area around Vista and the Edgewood Acres section.

As to how much it will cost, he said, "I am not sure, but service will begin, the mayor had this to say: 'First, it will probably cost in the neighborhood of $1,125,000. The city will not be bonded but the services will be extended in a similar manner as the installation of natural gas. It will be done through the sale of revenue certificates which will be retired through a bond issue. The new income from water and sewer services to amortize the cost, and that the entire project will be new sewage treating plant and sewage system would be in effect within two years, with the effective date of the change of city limits to be effective December 31, 1957.'

Learn And Obey

Traffic safety specialists say that the questions most often asked of them is, "What causes the most accidents in traffic?" This is a question easy to answer. The Illinois Division of Traffic Safety declares that there is only one answer.

The answer is so simple and seems so relatively insignificant that most persons refuse to believe that it could apply to them. Depending upon the questioner's individual feelings, the answer they want to hear is: Excessive speed, slow speed, intoxication, faulty equipment, bad roads, and unfavorable weather, darkness or teen-age antics. Admittedly bad, none of these approaches the volume of accidents caused by the biggest traffic killer of all—failure to know and obey traffic laws.

During this season, or any season, it would be well if everyone would brush up on their driving habits. No better way to brush up is to become familiar with the traffic laws, but even the best knowledge does no good unless this knowledge is applied. Each driver must also obey traffic laws can never be enforced against a large percentage of drivers. They are obeyed voluntarily by most of today's drivers.

Many seasoned and skilled drivers are likely to become careless in obeying traffic laws at times, and even in living with them while in the streets and highways. The Illinois Division of Traffic Safety says that fatal accidents can be cut in half any time all drivers decide to obey the law. It's worth while trying it out.

HERMAN TALMADGE Reports From WASHINGTON

THERE IS NO limit to the extent to which the Attorney General of the United States could control the private lives of American citizens under the terms of the Administration's misnamed civil rights bill.

As presented to the Senate, this measure vests in the Attorney General absolute authority to enforce "equal protection of the laws" by "any right or privilege of a citizen."

He can do so through federal court injunctions issued in the name of the United States which automatically preclude jury trials and subject accused persons to unlimited fines, prison sentences or both. He could call on the President to back his injunctions with the full might of the nation's armed forces.

THE LANGUAGE of the bill is so loose and broad that it covers every human activity from the cradle to the grave. Through its sweeping provisions it would, in effect, make it possible to control every aspect of the lives of individual citizens held by the Attorney General to affect the rights and privileges of any other person or persons.

During this season, or any season, it would be well if everyone would brush up on their driving habits. No better way to brush up is to become familiar with the traffic laws, but even the best knowledge does no good unless this knowledge is applied. Each driver must also obey traffic laws can never be enforced against a large percentage of drivers. They are obeyed voluntarily by most of today's drivers.

Many seasoned and skilled drivers are likely to become careless in obeying traffic laws at times, and even in living with them while in the streets and highways. The Illinois Division of Traffic Safety says that fatal accidents can be cut in half any time all drivers decide to obey the law. It's worth while trying it out.

OUT OF THE PAST Part Fact—Part Fancy

By Maude Brannen

1890 - 1900

The early years of the 90's brought to our country the worst depression it has ever known.

Every railroad in the land went into bankruptcy as a result of the depression.

But our little city had been inoculated with vitamins of civic responsibility and pride, and ambition.

If you can't remember the board side walks, you missed something. What a relief to step out of sand onto the wood! A block each way the side walks went. They gave our town an Atlantic City air.

I have often wondered who found my silver dollar which rolled down a crack between the boards.

This was no longer a tough town. The four churches—Baptist, Primitive, Methodist and Presbyterian—were showers of blessings.

They put the devil out of business when they drove out of town the preachers who had been in the city for years.

Excess Nitrate Source of Trouble

Excess nitrate in silage or alfalfa can cause a drop in milk production, abortion or death in cattle depending on their condition and the amount of excess. The American Veterinary Medical Association warned today.

Sources of excess nitrate include dry cornstalks, silage made from drought-stricken corn, sweet potato vines, and fertilizer sacks or other agricultural chemicals left where animals can reach them.

NEWEST BOLL WEEVIL INSECTICIDE OFFERS SAFETY IN USE...

Malathion, a phosphate insecticide with low toxicity to man and animals, stops "hard-to-kill" boll weevil.

You can now control "hard-to-kill" or "resistant" boll weevils without using insecticides that are hard to handle safely. The answer: a weevil-control program based on malathion.

Deadly to Weevils—Malathion is the newest weapon against weevils. It gets the toughest specimens. Yet, because malathion is low in toxicity to man and animals, it's easy to handle safely. In fact, the United States Department of Agriculture calls it "...one of the safest insecticides to handle."

Wide Safety Margin—Malathion is a phosphate, with all the weevil-killing power of other phosphates. But, unlike the others, malathion is actually less toxic to man and animals than DDT and other chlorinated insecticides.

U. S. Public Health Service—Here's what the United States Public Health Service says in its Clinical Memoranda on Economic Poisons: "...the toxicities of malathion (through mouth or skin) are less than those of DDT."

Cleans Up Many Other Pests—When you use malathion for weevils, you'll also clean up aphids, thrips, spider mites, leaf hoppers, lygus bugs, white flies, leaf worms and leaf perforators when present. Consult local agricultural authorities for malathion use recommendations in your area. Malathion dust and sprays, alone or in combination with other insecticides, are available under the brand names of well known manufacturers. Your dealer can offer you a choice and supply you with literature.

Soil-Water Conservation

By E. T. ("Red") Mullis

W. B. Altman, of Statesboro, and I went all over his 110-acre woodland and pasture place near Clito last week. Planning a woodland and grass farm was a nice treat. At the open land is planned for pastures of coastal bermuda and bahia grass while the woodland program will consist mostly of hardwood control, thinning, fire protection, and harvesting. Mr. Altman is sold on good woodland management and is doing an outstanding job on this phase of farming. He is cooperating fully with the Georgia River Soil Conservation District.

R. L. Poes of Brooklet is cooperating with the Georgia River S. C. D. in planning and applying the necessary soil and water conservation measures on the J. M. Williams estate near Brooklet. Crop rotations which include soil building legumes on this good class one land will do the job on his cultivated land. Protection from wind erosion is to be provided by wind breaks and wood-land. Pastures of coastal bermuda and bahia grass on class two land will furnish summer grazing for his cows. Proper woodland management including fire protection, tree planting, hardwood control and thinning will round out his conservation program.

R. P. Miller is planning for better land use and treatment on his farm at Denmark. Most of his land is class one which means crop rotations system which includes plenty of soil building legumes and grasses will keep his land producing to capacity. He plans to go more into a grass-crop rotation system in the future, especially with tobacco.

Mr. Miller overcame tremendous odds in building a nice pond. He dug one out of an old grady pond area and it has worked successfully for irrigation. He is now faced with the problem of weeds in the shallow areas. He plans to drain it and deepen the edges to prevent this in the future.

Atoms Tracing Causes For Fever

Radioactive doses of calcium and phosphorus are being used by scientists engaged in animal health research to discover the relationship of these two elements and vitamin D in milk fever, according to a report in the Journal of the American Veterinary Medical Association.

Massive doses of vitamin D increased the absorption of both calcium and phosphorus from the intestinal tract of mature cows, the report said. Radioactive calcium, however, disappeared from the blood.

That the Bookmobile visits every section in the county and that the Library personnel are always glad to know of additional people who want this service.

That regularly the Bookmobile is parked in Brooklet for service to that community and approximately 100 people avail themselves to this service. Your community can have this service if a reasonable number of people want it.
